A Sunday symphony

Concert to feature
K-State composer,
FHSU violinist

Brandie Elliott
the university leader

At 3 p.m. on Sunday, the Hays Symphony Orchestra will perform in Beach-Schmidt Performing Arts Center on the Fort Hays State campus.

The orchestra will perform "Cassandra's Dance" by Hanley Jackson. Jackson, a resident composer at Kansas State University, will be seated in the audience enjoying the concert.

Dr. James Fudge, assistant professor of music, will perform Max Bruch's "Violin Concerto in G minor, Op. 26."

Following the intermission, the orchestra will perform Franz Joseph Haydn's "Symphony No. 94 in G, Surprise (1791)."

While an undergraduate at California State University-Northridge, Jackson composed "Cassandra's Dance." He holds a bachelor of arts degree in composition from Northridge as well as a master of arts degree in California State University-Long Beach.

Jackson founded the Electronic Music Studio and the Comprehensive Musician Program at KSU.

"(Jackson) has won annual awards from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers,"

—Mark Bowers / The University Leader
Daniel Delisi, associate professor of music, directs the Hays Symphony Orchestra in practice in Beach-Schmidt Performing Arts Center last month.

according to a press release. "Many of his works are for large ensemble and tape, a mixed-media form which combines pre-recorded, synthesized sound with live music."

Fudge has both a bachelor's and master's degree in violin performance from Indiana University and a doctorate from Florida State University.

He serves as concertmaster of the Hays Symphony and he also teaches string pedagogy and methods, chamber music and some FHSU general education courses.

Fudge, in the past, has held membership in the Halifax Symphony, the New Orleans Symphony, the Colorado Music Festival Orchestra, the Minnesota Sinfonia and numerous opera and ballet organizations.

Tickets to the Sunday afternoon performance can be purchased at the Student Service Center or at the box office the day of performance.

March: Celebrating Women's History

Melissa K. Beckett
the university leader

For all of the women in the world, there is finally a chance for them to celebrate who they are. March is Women's History Month.

On March 19, 1996, president William J. Clinton declared March to be Women's History Month. Women everywhere are to be recognized for their contributions to the world.

Fort Hays State University, due to the conflict with spring break, will not be sponsoring any activities for Women's History Month this year during the month of March, but the Kelly Center is hoping to sponsor some activities in April.

"With spring break coming up so fast, we'll probably have events for Women's History Month take place in April. Although March is Women's History Month, that's not particularly significant. What is significant is having an event on this campus that is related to diversity," Rachel Michelson, from the Diversity Awareness Programs office, said.

One activity that is being discussed for the celebration of Women's History Month is a film about women of color.

"I think it [Women's History Month] is a great idea. I think that they should have [in celebration of Women's History Month] women speakers and women performers," Billie Teal, graduate teacher assistant, said.

For Women's History Month 1996, the Kelly Center sponsored a panel related to international women's issues.

"Dr. Pelgy Vaz spoke on women in India and Dr. Josephine Squires spoke on women in Great Britain," Michelson said.

Also in relation to Women's History Month, there will be a Women of Color Conference in Topeka on April 19. The conference will be from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Holiday. Some sessions include: race relations; women in the political arena; and violence and women.

Interested people should contact Dr. Myra Gordon, Melanie Salter, or Michelson in the Kelly Center or at 628-4401.

Midterm grades can be useful tool or a pain

Midterm grades were due to the Registrar by Monday. I picked mine up Tuesday afternoon.

Have you?

Are midterm grades a waste of teacher, advisor and student time?

Or, are they valuable insights to a student's progress?

If no one bothers to go pick up his or her grades; then, yes, it was a waste of time for the instructor to go through the hassle of figuring grades and entering them on the computer.

Another instance, when this seems a waste, occurs when there is only one grade for the student by midterm in a certain class. For instance, the midterm test. Hmm... that's pretty hard to average. Ha, Ha.

On the other side, if a student has handed in countless homework assignments, quizzes and tests, the midterm grades are nice to have handed out. This is especially nice when instructors count homework as a certain percentage of the total grade and tests another percent. Suddenly, students must all become math wizards.

Attendance is another item that instructors often look at for a student's grade. If a student isn't in class every day (like he or she should be, barring family or weather problems), how can one average in a particular instructor's feelings on how well a student has attended class?

Participation is another vague variable that some instructors throw in to the total score to insure the individual student is contemplating the class lecture as it pertains to different aspects of society and life.

Midterm grades also help a student to see how far ahead or behind one is in his or her educational goals. If a student shoots for an "A" but has a "B" at midterm, the student knows that some buckling down and more astute studying must occur. Also, if this same student has an "A" at midterms, he or she knows to keep up the same amount of work for the remainder of the semester; and all should be fine.

A situation when this might be more knowledge than a student should have could happen like this: a student sees he or she has the grade he or she wants. Then, this particular student starts to slack, because he or she thinks that the grade is "in the bag." This slacking causes a grade slide, and the final becomes the deciding factor between a "B" or an "A."

I believe midterm grades allow the instructors a means of escape when it comes to final-grade time, also. A student can't come and complain about not knowing exactly what grade he or she had earlier in the semester when he or she disagrees with the final grade received.

Midterm grades also give the student's advisor a chance to check in with advisees. Many times, an advisor would probably only meet with the advisee to enter new class schedules once a semester. This way, though, the advisor can sound out if a student is excelling in one area of studies and maybe not in another. An advisor needs to know these things in order to effectively aid in course, and sometimes major and minor field, selections.

Midterm grades may be a headache for instructors; but, in the long run, students who genuinely care about their progress will check in and see how they are doing. Even if it only helps one student, I feel midterm grades are worth the hard work and effort that the instructors do to enter and figure the grades.

P.S. — A little act of random kindness: Good job instructors and advisors on another midterm completed (and hair still left on those heads who had hair to begin with).

Today's Question ...

How did the original 'Star Wars' movies affect you and what do you think of the re-release?

J. R. Rasette
Salina senior

"I had all the action figures. I think it's great! It gives the younger kids a chance to see it on the big screen."

Amy Atkinson
Denver, Colo. sophomore

"I'm not a big Star Wars fan. I haven't been to the movies yet."

Travis Schmidt
TMP junior

"They didn't affect me too much but I think it's pretty cool they re-released them with better sound and added parts."

Jennifer Goetz
Hays junior

"I had the little figures, the little Ewoks. It was like a flashback because I remember seeing it as a kid, but not thinking it was that big of a deal."

Shannon Augustine
TMP junior

"I don't really know. I'm not really into it. I never saw it or rented the video. It's odd it did so well, but I'm not surprised."

Michelle David
Madison, Wis. graduate student

"I thought the re-release was overblown but it was the first movie I fell in love with."

Mothers deserve help

Childcare responsibilities should be shared

As I give my first column a try, I wonder what should I write about. What have I experienced lately?

A BABY.

Last July, my husband and I came home with this wonderful creature we named Chance. He has affected our lives tremendously—surprise, surprise! He's great, but being a parent is hard.

If you've got kids you understand how much work they involve. If you've ever seen an exhausted Mom hauling kids, groceries, a diaper bag, (no purse because moms have to give them up when they have kids), then you can probably empathize.

Yes, babies are lots of work and really stress parents out—especially when they don't sleep through the night. However, they are truly miraculous.

During their first three months they cry a lot, but it's so exciting just watching them. As a parent, you wonder what you have gotten yourself into.

Will I be a good parent?

What will this little guy be like later?

From four months on, look out. Babies develop personalities then and start to perform miraculous tricks everyday. They do things like sprout teeth. Or, you wake up one morning (after being up most of the night) and your baby is STANDING.

One of my high school teachers calls children a financial luxury (she doesn't have any), but I think that's pushing it a little. However, babies are expensive. Most are expected to go through 10,000 diapers and there's always a big doctor bill from the start.

Even with all the fun stuff like buying and changing diapers and staying up all night kids are great. They have fresh views about the world and moms help shape these kids' minds. So why aren't moms respected more?

Why don't people give mothers a helping hand?

Why aren't there changing tables (a place to lay a baby down in order to change her diaper) in any store besides Wal-Mart or The Mall?

Why aren't they in MEN'S restrooms all over America?

Why aren't there parking spaces reserved for the moms mentioned above (the ones lugging everything) and even moms-to-be?

Other cultures revere women and especially mothers. Women have the power to perpetuate the species. Yes, men help a little, but look at what women go through in order to have and raise children. Women have to be selfless and even when we do take five minutes for ourselves we feel guilty because we're not doing something for someone else.

Women should be respected for the work they do and even given a helping hand sometimes. All the moms I know work or go to school, take care of their kids, their house, bills, and their significant other.

Yes, men are becoming more household oriented and do more and more cooking, cleaning, and childcare everyday. Still, it's the mom who does the majority.

In an ideal world, everyone's duties would be equal. There would be childcare in every work place in order to make life easier on parents. Maternity leave would be long enough to recover from having a child and to get to know your baby. So the next time you see a mom struggling out a door with kids etc. in tow, give her some respect and a helping hand, too.

Simply put, Howard Stern is a pig. A pig yes, but a successful one.

The new movie "Private Parts," now showing, is the story of Howard's ascendance to his present position.

This movie is not an attempt at an apology of any kind. It is more of a window into the person who is Howard Stern.

The movie is filled with lots of laughs and vulgar humor which are the Stern trademark.

For example, the movie starts with Stern's appearance on MTV as Fatman. After he goes backstage, he must confront the rest of the stars of rock and roll, and he explains even they hate him.

Ozzy Osbourne has a cameo at this part and even he berates Stern for his "show."

In the next scene, which I found reminiscent of "Forest Gump," Howard is on a plane and the woman with the seat assignment next to him tries not to sit there.

As she realizes who he is, Howard begins to try to explain why he is the way he is.

The story follows his life from childhood to present. We first see Stern playing himself as a socially retarded college freshman, who couldn't even get a date with a blind girl.

In a voice over, Stern admits he looks a little old for this part but asks the viewer to suspend disbelief for a while.

This simple act of explanation sets the tone for how the rest of the film unfolds.

The movie follows Stern, his wife, played by Mary McCormack, as they attempt to make their way in life. Also it tells the story of how Stern, Robin Quivers, and Fred Norris, all playing themselves, take over the airwaves.

At the end, Stern's attitudes have changed a little. I couldn't help leaving with the feeling that it was all really a story about how he loves his wife and how he found himself.

The diversity of the crowd floored me. Old, young, and almost every facet of society was represented in the theater and nobody seemed shocked, outraged or disgusted. We were simply laughing our foolish heads off together.

A little tip for this one is not to leave right away because there are some clips at the end of the film which are hilarious.

The movie is vulgar without a doubt. Nudity? Lots. Profanity? Lots. Violence? Some. Laughs and Story? Plenty to go around.

This one definitely gets an "A" on my grading scale.

Intramurals offer many activities for the spring

Nick Schwen
the university leader

The Fort Hays State Intramural-Recreational Sports Dept. will be offering several activities for students and faculty to participate in during the spring.

On Tuesday, entries are due for the singles bowling tournament. There will be divisions for men and women. The bowling competition will begin on Tuesday as well.

One of the intramural's biggest events will take place next week. On Wednesday, the intramural dept. will host an Easter Egg Hunt. This will take place at 6 a.m. at gate two of Gross Memorial Coliseum. They will be giving away $500 in cash and prizes. There will be a one dollar entry fee for the contest. Individuals wanting to participate are asked to pre-register in the intramural office.

The intramural dept. will host several activities in the month of April.

On April 1, entries are due for the doubles bowling tournament. Play will begin on the same day. Both men's and women's divisions will be offered.

On April 4, entries are due for people who want to participate in softball. The softball competition will begin on a date to be announced later. The captain's meeting will be on April 7.

A coed doubles bowling tournament will take place on April 8. Entries for the competition are due on April 8.

INTRAMURAL update

On April 9, entries are due for the 3 on 3 sand Sunday night volleyball competition. A captain's meeting will be on April 10 and play will begin on April 13. Both men's and women's divisions will be offered.

A bench press contest will take place on April 15. Entries are due the same day. The intramural dept. will offer both men's and women's competition for this event.

Soccer competition will begin on April 21 with entries due by April 18. Men's and women's divisions will be offered.

An arm wrestling tournament will be held on April 22. Entries are due the same day.

Men and women can compete in a golf scramble on April 24-28. Entries for the competition will be due by April 28. A coed division will also be offered for the competition.

A 10-point pitch tournament will take place on April 29 with entries being due by the same day.

On May 1, the intramural dept. will host a pillow smoker competition. Entries for this event are due April 30.

The final event the intramural dept. will host for the semester is the Ice Block Olympics. Entries for this event are due on May 6 with competition starting on the same day.

For more information about any of these events, stop by Cunningham Hall room 128 or call 628-4373 or 628-4369.

Baseball team to play Regis

Tiger senior Jeff Neher ducks for safety after a wild pitch is thrown by a Washburn Ichabod at Larks Park earlier this season.

Tigers record stands at 6-3

Chad Simon
the university leader

The Fort Hays State Tigers will open up Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference baseball play with a road game tomorrow at Regis University.

FHSU is 6-3, while Regis is 3-14 overall and 0-2 in RMAC play.

Head Coach, Bob Fornelli, said "This is a fun club. We are getting better every day we play. This team shows a lot of promise."

Fornelli is impressed with his pitching staff in the early season, despite losses of 1-8 and 13-17 to Northeast Oklahoma and Wichita State University. "Our pitching staff has really carried us."

"Our batters got a wake-up call against Wichita State. When we put our pitching and hitting together, we should be good," said Fornelli. He is also happy with his team's defensive play this season.

FHSU played Kansas Wesleyan on the road yesterday. As of press time, scores were not available.

The Tigers defeated Kansas Wesleyan, 9-2, on March 3 at home.

FHSU is currently ranked 25th in the Collegiate Baseball Magazine NCAA Division II Poll.

The Tigers' next home game will be March 21 at Larks Park when they host the University of Southern Colorado. Game time is set for 7 p.m.

Lady Tiger tennis team in action

Janelle Mildrexler
the university leader

Although their spring season began Feb. 23, the Fort Hays State University Women's tennis team has been in action for a long time.

"We finished our fall season in mid-October. We've been practicing since the first day of school this semester," Brian Flax, head women's tennis coach, said.

"It's a year round commitment. They have to be dedicated. We run and lift weights on Tuesdays and Thursdays for almost the whole year," Flax said.

With a season record of 6-2, all their hard work is paying off. "One of the biggest advantages of this team over the past few years is that we've been able to keep our roster consistent. All eight have been with us all year and they've all stayed the same."

"Our lineup is pretty well set since the beginning of the year. Everyone is really comfortable about where they are playing," Flax said.

In the number one spot is Kelley Roberts, Grantville sophomore. "Obviously number one is a tough spot to play. She's really intense and a great leader too," Flax said.

The number two space is filled by Ali Moore, Kingman sophomore. "She had to play the number one spot last year as a freshman. She became a better player, and this year she's playing number two and doing a great job," Flax said.

Numbers three and four are Mandy Flower, Winfield freshman, and Robin Horan, Abilene freshman, respectively.

"Mandy played strictly doubles in high school and just started playing singles. She doesn't realize how good she can be yet. Robin is about as consistent a player as you can have. She doesn't make a whole lot of mistakes. She was 135-16 in high school," Flax said.

Number five in the lineup is Courtney Olsen, Pratt freshman. "She's been really fun and we're really happy to have her. She's made our team better," Flax said.

The number six spot is Shannon Gottschalk, Hays freshman. "She is probably the best athlete in the conference. She wins a lot of matches because of her athletic training," Flax said.

Seventh space is taken by Kristy Courtois, Pratt junior. "She's a walk-on and she's been really fun. We're glad to have her. She doesn't get to play much, but she definitely makes us a better team," Flax said.

Also helping with the team are Bridget Broadhead, Wichita senior, student coach and Mike Willey, Abilene senior as assistant coach.

Monday, the tennis team matched up against University of Nebraska at Kearney.

"My new girls may not realize how big it is to play Kearney. They are definitely one of the top teams in the conference," Flax said.

FHSU, however, was defeated. Only Olson (6-4, 6-2) and Gottschalk (forfeit) won in the singles and Moore and Bailey (8-1) won in the doubles.

Yesterday, the team played Metropolitan State College of Denver. Today, the meet is against Denver University and Colorado Christian University. Tomorrow, the team will meet with Regis University.

Outside shooting could be problem for KU

Craig Horstap
associated press sports writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The stat sheet from No. 1 Kansas' devastating defeat of Missouri in the Big 12 championship game shows only one possible problem area for the Jayhawks — outside shooting.

Billy Thomas and Jerod Haase were a combined 2 for 12 on 3-point tries.

But even with that performance, Kansas shot 54.1 percent for the game. And a team that makes 20 of its first 30 shots, as the Jayhawks did against Missouri, isn't going to lose very often.

Coach Roy Williams kept his starters in the game longer than necessary — risking the chance of an injury — in part because Thomas is struggling with his shot and in part because Paul Pierce was having such a big day that he wanted to keep him on a roll.

"Billy is struggling a little bit and he's lost a little bit of his confidence so I wanted to give him some minutes," Williams said.

It worked out for the best. Thomas made his last 3-point try after missing six.

"We have a saying, 'You're only as good as your last whatever,'" Thomas said. "It was good to end the day on that note."

Kansas (32-1) has such a variety of weapons on offense that a bad day by a single player has always been compensated for by someone else.

Ryan Robertson stepped in for the injured Jacques Vaughn at the start of the season, and Raef LaFrentz turned into a dominating, all-America candidate when center Scot Pollard was hurt in mid-season.

On Sunday, it was Pierce stepping up, with 30 points and 11 rebounds in the 87-60 victory over Missouri. It was the first postseason tournament title for the Kansas seniors.

"He was phenomenal," Pollard said at least three times.

Pierce has the quickness to drive the basket for a dunk, or slash his way inside for a short jumper. For good measure, he was 4 of 4 on his 3-point attempts against Missouri, which was out of the game in the first five minutes.

For the first time in his career, Vaughn this season has shown the ability to score whenever the Jayhawks need a basket, freeing himself for a driving layup when possible and shooting better from the outside than he ever has.

As they head for Memphis and their first-round game Thursday against Jackson State, the only way the Jayhawks look vulnerable is if their outside touch deserts them and they run into a team with enough size to go up against LaFrentz and Pollard.

But that hasn't happened in 33 games so far. The Jayhawks often solve any shooting woes with their combination of relentless defense and a fast-break offense.

"When we get into an up-and-down game, we're pretty doggone good," Williams said.
